Race Winner Herb Willis Intended To Beat 30 Minutes — And He Did

By Paul Marks
Telegraph Bureau

The ball was in Herb Willis' court Monday. Two years ago, Willis set the course record for the Macon Labor Day Road Race with a time of 30:28. Last year's winner, Mark Embler, tied that record while Willis was sidelined with an injury. This year was Willis' chance to answer as Embler missed the race.

For more stories and photos of the race, see Pages 7A, 8A and 1B.

Willis' answer was loud and clear as he became the first runner to cover the course in less than 30 minutes in the history of the race. Willis ran the 10,000-meter course in 29:59.7 to capture the fifth annual race Monday morning. The race was sponsored by The Macon Telegraph and News and the Macon Tracks Club.

Anne Wright won the women's division with a time of 37:23.

Willis held the previous course record of 30:28 jointly with Embler. Willis set the old record in 1979 before Embler tied it in last year's race.

The 21-year-old Willis trailed the early leader, Bruce Skiles of Columbus, until the 2-mile mark where he surged into the lead. From that point on, Willis was never challenged as he steadily increased his lead over Skiles and third-place finisher Jeff Galloway. Willis had about a 200-yard advantage when he crossed the finish line at the entrance to Central City Park.

Willis placed himself firmly in command of the race at the second major hill of the course as the runners moved up Forsyth past the College Street Hospital. Willis glided out of the reach of a struggling Galloway who had been running in Willis' shadow up until that point.

"I was trying to break 30 minutes in the race," said Willis. "That was my objective."

Willis' winning time averages out to 4:40.8 per mile.

"I didn't want to challenge anyone early in the race," Willis said, "and it took me most of mile two to make up the distance the leaders had established over me."

Willis, a member of the Florida State University track team, has recorded an all-time best of 29:11 at 10,000-meters.

This is one of the better road races I have run," said Willis. "I don't try to compare track times with the road times I have had because it's an entirely different matter, but I am pleased with the race I ran today. I have always had good success in Macon."

Willis was second in the 1978 race in addition to his record-setting pace of two years ago.

The field for this year's race was the largest ever with 1,385 runners registered for the race. 1,200 runners completed the 6.2-mile race. The race was supposed to start at an earlier time than last year's race to avoid the heat, but a delay for out-of-town registrants caused an 11-minute late start.

Sentimental Victory

Anne Wright Could Do No Wrong in Monday's Race

By Paul Marks
Telegraph Bureau

When Anne Wright of Macon came in first place in the women's division of the Macon Labor Day Road Race in a time of 37:23, she didn't have to wait until she got home to celebrate with her family. A large number of them ran the course with her.

"I had five members of my immediate family run with me," said Wright, "and my brother, my sister, a nephew and a niece were in the race, also."

It was fortunate Wright had so many family members together for the race to recognize her victory. The Labor Day race marked her first overall victory in the women's category of a major race. Wright's finishing time was a personal best as well as the best women's time in the race.

"It was hot out there today," Wright said, "and I ran the first mile a little too fast. I just try to maintain a 5:55 per mile pace, and that places me where I want to be."

Wright said she felt her main competition in the race came from the Atlanta track clubs.

"Tracy Stone and Shirley Silsby of Atlanta are the runners I usually have to beat," Wright said. "Silsby was not in the race today, but Stone was."

WRIGHT SAID she felt she might be able to lower her time to below 37 minutes — if she can find the time to train.

"When you take care of three children in addition to a full-time job, it is almost impossible to find the time to train," Wright said.

The 36-year-old Wright is the head of the Nursing School at Macon Junior College.

The Macon Labor Day Race, sponsored by the Telegraph and News has sentimental ties for Wright.

"The Labor Day race was the first race I ever entered, and that was two years ago," Wright said. "I finished in 44:11 and was third overall in the female division that year."

The finishing times of women runners have become more and more competitive according to Wright.

"I run faster every year," Wright said, "and it seems like I can barely keep up with my best previous place."
